Selection criteria for patients with type 2 diabetes who will benefit from bariatric surgery. Bariatric surgery is now widely used to achieve lasting weight loss in obese patients. Currently, many patients with type 2 diabetes are not considered as optimal candidates for this treatment. We used a computerized clinical decision support system for diabetes to develop a patient selection algorithm based on clinical variables and the prevalence of diabetes in bariatric surgery candidates. For men and women, the algorithm identified 165 and 145 patients who had the highest predicted chance of a good outcome with bariatric surgery. The influence of disease duration, impaired glucose tolerance, and comorbidity
